

Snipers play a key role in the world's armies. They target commanders on the opposing side and other targets with an outsize impact. Working by themselves, they can pin down a group, creating fear and confusion. This week on War College we look at the history of snipers and the role they play now. It's fair to say the role wasn't always considered a badge of honor.